

MAIL PILOT ON WAY OVER ATLANTIC IN BRAZIL-AFRICA HOP

French Aviator Believed Halfway Through 1,850-
Mile Flight

REPORTS "ALL WELL"

New Airmail Path Being
Blazed by East-to-West
Journey

PARIS, July 9.—Twelve hours after taking off from Natal, Brazil, on the first air-mail trip from America across the Atlantic, to Dakar, French equatorial Africa, Jean Mermoz, radioed that all was well. His message said:

"At 7.45 A. M., G. M. T. (3.45 A. M., Philadelphia time). All goes well. The weather is still the same, south wind, sea slightly rough, visibility good, sky three-tenths clouded. At 7 A. M., there remained gasoline for twelve hours."

There was no mention of position, although calculating an average speed of eighty miles an hour, the flier should have covered 960 miles, or slightly more than half the 1,850-mile trip.

NATAL, BRAZIL, July 9.—Jean Mermoz, French air mail pilot, flew northeastward today toward Dakar, French equatorial Africa, in the first eastward air mail crossing of the Atlantic.

Between Lake Bomfim, twenty miles from here, and his goal, there lay a course of about 1,850 miles, which, at an average speed of eighty miles an hour, he could expect to negotiate in about twenty-two hours and fifteen minutes.

Departure here was at 4.32 p. m. (3.32 p. m. Philadelphia time), yesterday, so that completion of his flight might be expected at about 5 p. m. Dakar time (2 p. m. Philadelphia time) today. His recent westward crossing of the Atlantic, from St. Louis, Senegal, took only twenty hours and sixteen minutes, but was made with the advantage of favorable prevailing winds.

At 1.45 a. m., G. M. T. today (9.45 p. m. Philadelphia time Tuesday) the plane passed over Saint Paul's rocks, a cable repair station located less than 500 miles from Natal, and about 340 miles northeast of the Brazilian island penal colony, Fernando da Noronha. The plane passed near Fernando da Noronha but did not sight the island.

Saint Paul's rocks, a tip of land in the vastness of the equatorial Atlantic, is a cable repair station. It was the last land the plane expected to sight until it should reach the vicinity of Porto Praia, Cape Verde Islands, which is directly on its course to Senegal.

Aboard the plane, besides Mermoz, were his two companions of the westward flight, his radio operator, Leopold Gimme, and his navigator, Jean Abery. The plane carried 600 pounds of air mail, brought here from Pernambuco, Rio de Janeiro, and Buenos Aires by the Aero-Postal Co. Other planes will pick it up at Dakar and rush it to Paris and European cities.

Senator Grundy Sails For Tour of Europe

United States Senator Joseph R. Grundy, accompanied by his sister, Miss Margaret R. Grundy, Bristol, and Dr. Ross V. Paterson, dean of Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia, sailed from New York for Europe, last night, aboard the steamship Augustus, of Navigazione Generale Italiana Line.

Senator Grundy's first destination is Genoa, from where he will begin a tour of Italy, France, Spain, Germany, England, and other points of interest. It is the intention of Senator Grundy to return to Bristol early in September.

Max Slatoff Leases Trolley Office Building

Max Slatoff, antique dealer, has leased from William E. Doron, the building at Radcliffe and Market streets, which was occupied for many years by the Trenton, Bristol & Philadelphia Street Railway Company.

Renovations are being made. Windows are to be placed in the front and one doorway. An office will be built inside.

Mr. Slatoff plans to occupy the premises as an antique shop, moving from his present location.

Dwelling at Tullytown Completely Destroyed by Fire

Bristol old volunteer firemen were summoned this morning, shortly after midnight, to Tullytown.

A dwelling house along the canal owned by the Charles Warner Company was destroyed.

The house had been partly burned sometime ago but the blaze today completed its destruction.

Firemen stood by and watched the blaze but could not get near enough to fight it because of its location.

Perkasie Veteran Suffers A Stroke of Paralysis and Is Not Hit-Run Victim

OTHER NEWS NOTES

At first thought to have been a victim of the heat and later believed to have been struck by a hit-and-run driver, it has now been determined that John J. Wolfe, aged about 35, a veteran of the World War, who resides in Perkasie, and who was found in an unconscious condition near the foot of White Horse Hill on the Bethlehem Pike, above Sellersville, last Monday, suffered a stroke of paralysis.

Wolfe, an insurance salesman, was found lying by the side of his car and on the ground were a number of tools which indicated he had attempted to repair a tire. At first it was believed he suffered a sun stroke or was overcome by the heat. He was removed in an unconscious condition to Grand View Hospital and upon regaining consciousness the following day, Wolfe expressed the belief that he was the victim of a hit-and-run driver, he having suffered a laceration in the back of the head.

The veteran remained at the hospital until Wednesday, when he was removed to his home. The following morning he suffered a stroke of paralysis and the attending physician announced that without doubt he suffered a similar attack while attempting to repair a tire on the highway on Monday morning.

While in the service Wolfe was severely gassed and several years ago he underwent a serious operation, since which time he has had a silver plate in his stomach.

Wolfe was removed to a veterans' hospital in Philadelphia, where his condition is said to be quite serious. The stricken veteran is married and has one child.

As the result of an experience yesterday afternoon it is likely that the homes in Doylestown will not be left so wide open as usual.

Looking up from a book she was reading about 2 o'clock, a resident of Maple avenue was surprised to see a total stranger in the hallway of her home.

Seeing her, with her large dog nearby, the stranger inquired: "Is this the way out of town?"

Getting the information asked he left.

The annual camp meeting at Highland Park, near Sellersville, will open July 25, continuing for ten days.

Hundreds of persons annually attend the camp, remaining for the entire period on the grounds. Bungalows and tents are pressed into use to accommodate the throng, and prominent speakers are heard daily.

The spiritual director of the camp will be the Rev. W. L. Bollman, of Allentown, who will have charge of the activities at large. Rev. B. H. Quay, of Quakertown, will be in charge of the young people's division, while Rev. Paul Wert will take over the children's section.

Several evangelistic talks will be given in the course of the camp meetings by Rev. H. A. Frye, a well-known evangelist from Findlay, Ohio. He has prepared daily talks for the assembly, which will be given every evening. He will also preach afternoon and evening on the first Sunday of the camp.

The pianist appointed this year is Miss Esther B. Wert, of Perkasie, and Rev. Paul Wert, who is also director of the children's division, will be chorister.

Members of the Jerusalem Lutheran Church, Allentown, near Sellersville, tendered a reception to Rev. Edwin W. Andrews, who recently was elected pastor of the Ridge parish which is composed of Jerusalem and St. John's churches. Rev. Mr. Andrews succeeds Rev. Elmer S. Kidd, who is now pastor of the Friends parish near Allentown.

Mr. Andrews was born in Reading where he spent most of his life. He was graduated from Shillington High School in 1923, from Muhlenberg College in 1927 and Mt. Airy in June. His ordination took place on June 25. He moved to the parsonage on June 7. His parents are residing with him.

NUMBER OF OLD STURDY DWELLINGS OF INTEREST STILL REMAIN IN EDGELY--'SHADYSIDE' HAS QUITE A HISTORY--LARGE FRUIT STORAGE HOUSES

Mayors, Governors, Actors and People of Note Have Been Guests at Residence Now Occupied by Thomas G.
Hawkes--Hellings' Fruit Houses Provided Storage for 10,000 Barrels of Apples Which Was Unusual in Those Days.

Herewith is given the second installment of an interesting article dealing with the history and present day affairs of the Village of Edgely. Other installments will follow daily. A history of Edgely has never been compiled and a staff reporter of the Courier has gathered the material for the story from all available sources of information.

There are a number of old, sturdy dwelling houses in Edgely, well-known to residents of this section. One of these is "Shadyside," at present the home of Thomas G. Hawkes. "Shadyside" is located along the Delaware, the water frontage totalling 1250 feet.

This fine dwelling-place was once owned and occupied by the late N. Hellings, this gentleman living there for 30 years. The residence, a stone structure, has been added to and renovated during more recent years, but the original portion of the home is believed to be over 150 years old. A parlor that was once attached to the other portion of the house was detached some years ago, and moved to the lower part of the grounds, there to be used as a home for the gardener. Since the purchase of the property by Mr. Hawkes, 28 years ago, rooms have been added, and the place modernized in every respect. At present the dwelling comprises 21 large rooms and five baths. The original walls in the building are over two feet thick.

The late Mr. Hellings entertained extensively during his residence at "Shadyside," the group enjoying his hospitality including mayors, governors and actors of note. For 30 years he lived in the place, and was considered one of the wealthiest residents of the section, his money having been gained through the operation of a fruit storage plant.

The plant for fruit storage comprised two buildings, the location of which was along the river to the south of the dwelling house.

The storage plant provided space for 10,000 barrels of apples, which large quantity was frequently stored there at one time. Many kinds of fruit were there kept by Mr. Hellings who purchased such in car-load lots, and sold to retailers. It was the operator's boast that through the means of his cold storage place he was able to provide watermelon and cantaloupe for his family at Christmas time. Fruits were shipped from here to all sections of the United States as well as to many countries in Europe.

The apples were sorted in large quantities in a tunnel which connected the two storage buildings. Also through this tunnel ran a small track upon which the fruits were hauled in small cars between the structures and also down to the river to be loaded onto boats.

HOSPITAL LAWN FETE COMMENCES TONIGHT

An Affair of Beauty is Predicted for Four Evenings
This Week

NUMEROUS BOOTH'S

An affair beautiful--this is the promise for the Harriman Hospital lawn fete, this year, which affair takes place the four remaining nights of this week, starting this evening.

When festivities start at the hospital grounds tonight there will be found a merry-go-round of full size, carrying 38 riders, and equipped with an orchestral apparatus; Japanese tea garden; booths for display of local merchants' wares and advertising matter; game outfits of various kinds, and other pleasure-giving devices.

One of the items that has proved a subject of talk for the past few weeks, and which is inciting the interest of many is the treasure chest, many keys for which will open up real treasures for fortunate individuals. Not just one key, but many will prove the "Open Sesame" for this chest of treasures, and interest is keen.

Orville T. Girton Weds Miss Ruth E. Murray

In a wedding ceremony performed at the parsonage of the Bristol M. E. Church, last evening, by the pastor of the church, Rev. George F. Hess, Miss Ruth E. Murray became the bride of Orville T. Girton. The contracting parties are both residents of Morrisville.

The ceremony was performed at six o'clock. The attendants were: Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Girton, brother and sister-in-law of the groom.

The fruit storage plant ceased operation 38 years ago, and eight years later the buildings were burned. For some time portions of the stone walls remained as mute memorials to a once extensive and prosperous business.

Mr. Hellings, who is now deceased, was likewise noted for his fine

ST. ANN'S AND CROYDON BATTLE TO A TIE SCORE

Both Teams Play Like Cham- pions for Eight Innings

SCORE TIED AT 3 RUNS

Schedule For Tonight
CROYDON vs. EMILIE
(At Emilie)

Result of Last Night
Croydon, 3; St. Ann's, 3

By T. M. Juno

St. Ann's and Croydon Boys' Club played like champions last night on the "Saints" field as the two nines battled eight innings without deciding which was the better team. After final tabulations were made it was found that each team had scored 3 runs and both teams were credited with eight safe blows.

The game was well-played on the part of both teams and the game can be classed with some of the best frays played in the Twilight League this season. It was the closest game played since June 29 when Ed Sullivan pitched the Hibernians to a 1-0 victory over the Federals.

The fact that eight innings were played proved that the boys were on their toes at all times and not one fan left the ball field until the final man was retired. It was the first game that went eight innings in two seasons of ball playing.

Croydon had the game won until two were out in the last inning or regulation twilight playing. Tranotti was pitching good ball for the visitors and easily retired the first two batters on flies to the outfield. Then the disaster came. Whyno caught hold of a curve and whaled it to right field for three bases. Fields, one of the leading batters of the league, was up next and it seemed like an intentional pass. But Tranotti worked him into a three and two pinch and then tried to fan him with a slow hook which Fields slammed to center for a double, scoring the tying run and sending the game into the extra inning.

Croydon scored two runs off Bracco in the second inning and took the lead after singles by Fields and Massilla had scored a St. Ann's run in the first. With Gleason away, Adams hit to Pieo, who threw low to first for an error; Check followed with a double to right and Adams held up at third; Lake singled past Pieo and the two runners crossed the plate; Tranotti grounded out to Tulio.

A tally in the third tied the score for the "Saints." Fields was passed; Gilardi fouled to Gleason; Massilla was walked; Roe flied to Gleason; Oriola delivered in the pinch scoring a hit to left center which scored Fields, but the runner was out trying for second, Trindle to Tritscher.

Croydon took the lead by scoring again in the sixth. Parella walked and stole second; Gleason struck out; Adams singled to left; a single by Check counted Parella and Bracco was replaced by Whyno; Lake struck out and Tranotti flied to right.

Then came the dramatic finish put on by the St. Ann's team which made an extra inning possible.

Massilla was the star of the game in the field. He handled six hard chances and drew rounds of applause from the fans for his wonderful work around the hot corner. DiTanna and Gleason were also stars in the field.

Lake, of Croydon, and Fields and DiTanna, of the Saints, made two hits

DYNAMITE DISCOVERED ON READING TUNNEL

Menace to Trains Seen As Caps and Fuse Are Also Found

THORO' SEARCH MADE

Dynamite, detonating caps and fuse were found yesterday afternoon strewn in and on top of the mile-long tunnel carrying the Reading Railway Philadelphia-to-Bethlehem branch under the ridge of hills a half mile north of Perkasie.

Detectives were sent to scour the Bucks County section near where the explosives were found in an effort to discover who placed the dynamite at points which threatened disaster to trains passing through the tunnel.

Allen Leister, of Perkasie, walking through a field on one of the hills under which the tunnel passes, discovered a stick of dynamite. It was lying near the grating over a ventilator opening from the tunnel into the field.

Leister carried the dynamite to Elmer Markley, employed at the Perkasie station of the railroad. Markley immediately sent a squad of trackwalkers to scour the hills and the tracks in the tunnel.

The searchers discovered no more dynamite, but found scattered on the ground near where the dynamite was discovered several short lengths of fuse caps with which the explosive is detonated.

More caps and fuse were found inside the tunnel near the northern and near the southern openings. Forty-eight caps were found in all and the fuse when pieced together measured six feet in length.

The amount of dynamite was sufficient if exploded within the tunnel to dislodge tons of rocks and debris.

Youthful Fourth of July celebrators are suspected but detectives are investigating the possibility of a malicious attempt to damage railroad property.

GRANT INJUNCTION AGAINST STRIKERS

Hulmeville Hosiery Strikers Enjoined from Creating Trouble at Mill

ALLOWED FOUR PICKETS

DOYLESTOWN, July 9.—Strikers of the Hulmeville Hosiery Company were enjoined yesterday in a decree handed down in the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks County by Judge Hiram H. Keller, from interfering in any manner with employees of the Hulmeville Hosiery Company, this being the result of injunction proceedings brought by the hosiery company, recently, against the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, including Philadelphia Branch 1, Local 706; and South Langhorne Branch 4, Local 1509, and a number of other Philadelphia and South Langhorne hosiery workers.

The case was filed April 4th and the decree handed down orders that the plaintiff's bill of complaint be dismissed as to the Philadelphia Branch of the Union, but directs that the injunction be made permanent as to the South Langhorne Branch and its officers, including Charles O'Brien, president; Raymond Good, secretary, and their respective successors in office; and the following defendants: Dorothy Dicken, Winifred Dicken, Katherine Posenberg, Anna Boris, Julia Barbetta, Ray Thomas, Rachel Douthart, Elsie Dunkley, Vera Dunkley, Florence Pfeffer, Marie McCarthy, Ella Baumeister and Earl J. Thomas.

Defendants are restrained from in any manner interfering with employees of the company or with persons who desire to enter its employ, by use of threats, either in person or property, by intimidation, assault, public ridicule, or other unlawful means. Calling of names such as "scab" to persons passing along the streets going to or from the factory is prohibited.

Judge Keller ruled "that picketing on or near the premises of the plaintiff or on streets and highways leading thereto or in vicinity thereof, by more than four persons at any one time, and not before six o'clock in the forenoon, or after six o'clock in the evening, that is in any manner with the purpose and for the effect of intimidating, annoying and embarrassing, or through fear, exercising moral coercion over the plaintiffs or any member of the plaintiff firm, or those lawfully employed by the plaintiff or

Woman Sues to Prevent Electric Company's Line

DOYLESTOWN, July 9.—In equity court Monday before Judge Calvin S. Boyer, hearing was started in the application of Sophia M. Geddes, owner of a farm on the Danboro and Point Pleasant pike, for a preliminary injunction against the Philadelphia Electric Company.

Mrs. Geddes desires the injunction to prohibit the defendant company from transmitting and distributing electric current in excess of 2300 volts over a new 33,000 volt line recently erected along this highway to serve the Point Pleasant, Danboro and adjacent sections with electric service.

The plaintiff testified that some of the cross-arms and wires of the new 33,000 volt line cross her property and that she never granted permission to the defendant company to erect the line and that they never made any application to her. Three new wires were recently erected on this line, Mrs. Geddes testified. She stated that the center of the pole line is within eleven feet of her dwelling house. No right of way was ever granted the Philadelphia Electric Company, the plaintiff asserted.

Mrs. Geddes told Judge Boyer that she feared that her property would be damaged as a result of the new 33,000 volt line and that she believed it to be dangerous.

Counsel for the Philadelphia Electric Company in discussing the application before the hearing started stated if such an injunction was granted, it would deprive the section over which the line passes, of electric service such as is desired by them.

YOUTH, 19, INJURED WHEN MOTORCYCLE RUNS INTO TRUCK

Frank Whyno in Serious Condition at the Harriman Hospital

A HEAD-ON COLLISION

Accident Occurred on Red Lion Hill at Andalusia Yesterday

A young Bristol man was seriously and it is thought fatally injured yesterday afternoon when the motorcycle he was riding crashed head-on into a five-ton gravel truck.

The injured person is Frank Whyno, 19, 605 Cedar street. Whyno suffered a possible fracture of the skull, deep cuts and lacerations of the face and serious internal injuries.

He is in the Harriman Hospital where it is said that it is doubtful if he recovers.

Whyno was riding his motorcycle on the Bristol Pike at Andalusia yesterday afternoon. He was coming up the Red Lion Hill and cut out to pass an automobile traveling in the same direction that he was. In cutting out Whyno drove his machine quite some distance off the right side of the roadway and crashed into the truck which was traveling in the opposite direction.

The truck was driven by Joseph MacAfee, State Road, Torresdale. Whyno's motorcycle hit the truck head-on and both machine and rider were dragged for quite a distance.

The injured man was placed in the automobile of Jenks Watson, Bristol, and brought to the Harriman Hospital.

The truck is owned by Thomas King, Torresdale.

MacAfee was placed under arrest by the Bristol police and later turned over to the State Motor Patrol at South Langhorne. He was given a hearing before Justice of Peace Edward Lynn, and held in $2,000 bail to await the outcome of Whyno's injuries.

Bracken Post to Open Miniature Golf Course

A Little Legion Putt-Putt or Tom Thumb Golf Course will be opened by the Robert W. Bracken Post, American Legion, on the grounds of its Memorial Home at 619 Radcliffe street on or about July 21st.

The course will be one of 18 holes and will be very attractive, adding greatly to the already improved conditions of the grounds. The hazards will be beautiful in design and just hazardous enough to make play not only a pleasure but a very enjoyable pastime.

A charge of 25c will be made for the 18 holes, the Legion furnishing all necessary equipment. As the proceeds secured through the operation of this course are to go towards paying off the mortgage of $5,000 existing on the Home, it is hoped that both young and old of Bristol will patronize this new game.

The golf course will also be a new attraction for the Legion Block Party to be held on July 24th, 25th, 26th and August 1st and 2nd.

Although arrangements have not been completed the Legion this year plans to conduct this affair on Cedar street between Penn and Dorrance streets.

In addition to the attractions on the street in the many booths, side attractions will be conducted in various rooms of the post that will be of particular interest to music lovers, housewives, and although not definitely arranged, it is hoped to have a fashion show.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 9, 1930

THE BIG STICK

With one of his pension-law vetoes already overridden by Congress, President Hoover has shown rare courage and determination in opposing the veterans' bill and in promising it a veto if passed. Rarely has a president of the United States employed such vigorous language as Mr. Hoover used in his public attack on the bill.

"This bill," he said, "selects a particular group of 75,000 or 100,000 men, makes provision for them in the most wasteful and discriminatory way conceivable, and entirely neglects the equal rights to help of over 200,000 more veterans who are likewise suffering from disabilities incurred in civil life since the war. It contains many other discriminations and injustices. These things violate not only the facts but the very integrity of government. It is a sad thing for our government to set up standards of subterfuge to our people."

This strong statement instantly appeals to the people, who rejoice whenever a courageous president stands true to his obligations in spite of the pressure of congress. The public feels that the nation's interests are safe in the hands of a chief executive who fearlessly tells the truth as he sees it, without regard to politics.

In his quarrel with Congress, President Hoover has the support of the people, who believe he is sincere in his purpose to liberalize the laws for the care of disabled World War veterans. With him it is not a question of cheese-paring at the expense of the country's defenders. It is a case of fair and well-considered treatment for all veterans.

GOOD ADVICE

Known the world over as a connoisseur of fine horseflesh, Lord Dergy will be known henceforth in the United States as a connoisseur of America. He has returned to England after his mutually enjoyed visit with us to tell his countrymen what is true and essential about America and Americans rather than criticize what is un-English.

The kind of a fellow this Englishman is can be read in one particular bit of advice he gives us:

"If I were in your place I would not for a moment think of getting into any entangling alliance or treaty. Keep out of it—keep out of it. There is no reason why you should not, and thus make your influence felt all the more."

There is greater significance in these words coming from a Britisher. Ever since the war Americans have had constantly dimmed into their ears the "moral duty" that is theirs to mix up in all the "European messes." Here, at last, is a man with no ax to grind.

This sort of foreign visitor is a tonic to Anglo-American relations. He is not trying to be captious; he has nothing to put over on us, and he is not always looking for faults.

Can it be that Europe is actually discovering America?

"Come back Friday" means you're invited. "Come back some time" means you're not.

FRANK B. MURPHY

342 Hayes Street, Bristol, Pa.

Dawn was to be sacrificed!

trollable frenzy. "Do streams are dry in dere beds!"

"Ay—ee—ay—ee!" shrieked the natives.

Succumbing to the frenzy, both feigned and real, all about him, Hasmall began to chant in shrill tones, each word a challenge. Waving his arms and saluting to an unseen god, he chanted:

"The mothers beat their breast and cry.
 Fathers dare the lions in their bush, thirst-crazed.
 Our children weep with swollen lips and die!
 Over all, the hand of death is raised!"

Hasmall's genuine distress, and his crudely effective phraseology rather horrified the whites. A murmur of sympathy rose from the veranda. But before the natives could discover that their plight was exciting pity, Shep signaled them to continue their observation of the rites.

"Have mercy on us!" he implored wildly.

Immediately the natives joined in with him.

"Oh, have mere' on us!" they begged. "Have mercy!"

"Show mercy to us!" coaxed Shep.

Again there rose the wailing "Ay—ee—ay—ee."

Shep continued his exhortations. "Pray for water for de parched throats of our people. For de babies dat suffer and cry. And de men who die on de rail wit dere swollen tongues hangin' in de sun. Pray for water."

In greater volume the natives' cry rose to amend his words. "Ay—ee—ay—ee!" For several moments they sustained the shuddery harmonious note. When it died they stood silent, expectant. Eric slipped down the steps to Judson's side.

"This seems dangerous," he said. "Listen, men of Africa," said the Colonel, quick to appreciate that they were likely to become unmanageable if he remained silent.

"England is your friend. I, too, am your friend. We, too, suffer from the drought. We, too, wish the rain would come."

Hasmall addressed him sharply in surprise. "You wish the rain would come?"

"Certainly," returned the Colonel. "We wish it with all our hearts."

"If you wish it," demanded Hasmall unreasonably, "why you not order it?"

"Careful now," cautioned Eric in low tones. "I order it?" repeated Judson testily. "I am no witchman!"

"Then you don't keep the rain from falling?" said Hasmall.

"Certainly not!"

As if the Colonel's words confirmed their own doubtful suspicions, the natives upraised glad

SYNOPSIS

Fair-skinned Dawn, mystery girl, becomes the bride of the black god Matungu, against her wishes. Her sweetheart, Tom Allen, is transported to England where he enlists and is with the colonial troops that recapture, without bloodshed, the British Protectorate in East Africa. Shep Keyes, whip-wielding bully of the natives, had used a ruse to get Tom out of Africa. He hopes to intimidate Dawn by threatening to expose her to the natives as a white girl. Shep's plans are balked by the arrival of the British soldiers.

INSTALLMENT TWENTY-SIX

His words were, of course, a native prayer. But his refusal to accord it the customary singing delivery was his means of expressing his contempt for his fellow blacks. Eric was aware of his attitude, but Colonel Judson, unfamiliar with Shep's vagaries, merely looked at him dumbly.

"It isn't that—" The Colonel's words were drowned by the dissonant "Ay—ee—ay—ee" of the natives, a cry that rose like a tortured "Amen." Shep was quick to press his advantages. "De heat burns de jungle wit fire," he screamed, feigning unconsciousness to triumph. Rapidly they began to speak in their incomprehensible jibberish; all of them creatures of incomparable joy. Hasmall turned to them and raised his hands for silence.

"You have told us," the priest said, "that the white man do not stop the rain and make our people die. My people believe you. It is our own goddess who is to blame. Our Thabu!"

"No, no!" exclaimed Eric in involuntary protest.

"And we sacrifice Dawn!" Hasmall went on deliberately. "She is false to Malungu."

Colonel Judson shook his head. "No, Hasmall," he said; "I cannot permit any lives to be sacrificed."

"Then we all die," declared Hasmall.

"That is not likely, Hasmall. This drought cannot continue much longer. Not many will die."

"Not you white men, who are few," said Hasmall meaningly. He indicated his severed fingers, who all raised their spears to inform him of their fighting strength. Judson looked disturbed.

"You are few," continued Hasmall significantly, "and we are many."

He made no effort to conceal his threat. Hasmall, a believer in the voodooism he so fervently practiced, was not to be balked in making a sacrifice to a god whose dispensations were so urgently needed.

"Our men are as numerous," he continued, his gloating tone still heavy with warning, "as the fallen leaves of our dying trees."

Judson turned to Eric for counsel. "I think," advised the German, "it would be well to let them have their way for the present. It would be days before such a sacrifice could be offered. Meanwhile, there's always a chance that it might rain."

"Perhaps it would be better," admitted the Englishman. "But I don't like it. When," he asked Hasmall, "will you hold this sacrifice?"

"Three days shall we pray and offer incense to our god," answered Hasmall, "then if no rain comes, she dies as all false brides of Malungu die—on the Hills of Skulls."

Confident that rain would surely come before the natives had fully prepared for their sacrifice, Judson felt cheered by Hasmall's answer. But he hesitated to give ready consent to the plan and thus give the natives the impression that they had gained a victory over him.

"But you see, Hasmall," he temporized, "three days is so short a time to wait."

"My people believe our goddess false, and they will wait no longer," said Hasmall firmly.

The British officer turned to Eric for additional advice. Aware that Judson was merely feigning this deliberation, Eric assumed an expression of deep thought. For several minutes he exchanged whispered trifles with Judson while the natives stared in wonder. Finally Judson spoke up.

"Hasmall," he began with affected understanding of the priest's great problem. "I have become convinced that your grievance is just. Pray for three days, as you plan. I am sure your goddess will send you rain."

Bowing stiffly, Hasmall turned and summoned the natives to him. In excited voices they discussed the Colonel's decision and gradually wandered in small groups into the jungles. Shep loitered behind, as though desirous of being invited to the veranda. With no invitation forthcoming, he bestowed a final surly glance upon the whites and went upon his way.

"There's one nigger," observed Blink thoughtfully, his eyes on the departing whip man, "who's going to see to it that this sacrifice goes through."

Content that the rain would arrive in time to prevent the natives from executing their barbarous sacrifice, Colonel Judson turned his thoughts to other details. His first duty was to select the quota of German prisoners who were to be returned home under the terms of exchange.

"Well," he greeted Eric, "you soon will be fighting in happier places."

"I am being returned to Germany," asked Eric, surprised. "Yes, you head the quota. It's a pleasure to give you this good news."

Eric smiled. "It's odd," he observed introspectively, "here I am a little sad about returning. More and more I am beginning to understand Tom Allen's reluctance to go back to England. I now see his point entirely."

Judson turned to him questioningly. "I'm not quite clear," he said. "You don't want to go?"

"It isn't that," Eric hastily assured him. "As in Tom's case the time of departure is not a happy one. I'm thinking of that poor goddess they're so determined to burn."

"Don't let's talk of it," remonstrated Judson. "I don't want any worries until I must have them."

THE LIQUOR SITUATION IN AMERICA AND ENGLAND

To the Editor of the Public Ledger:

Sir—We learn from your news columns that Mrs. Graham Dougherty finds the English liquor law effective. Lady Astor finds it ineffective and would substitute prohibition.

Conceding for the sake of argument that Mrs. Dougherty was able to gain in one month more exhaustive and reliable information than Lady Astor in her years of observation, we must all admit that conditions are very different in the two countries. The police force of England has the admiration of the world. The courts are impartial. Justice is swift and sure. If the English law were enacted here, would the drinkers in our restaurants and cafes put their glasses aside on the stroke of midnight? Not so long as it is considered smart to defy the law and political pulls can prevent legal consequences.

Would all drinking places conform to the eight-hour license law? Not so long as magistrates have itching palms and ward bosses need votes. Pennsylvania had in the Brooks high-license law a reasonable and moderate method of liquor control. The liquor interests defied it as they have defied every other restricting measure. The English "pub" is bad enough, but it is not the center of political corruption as the American saloon was and may be again. The public has a short memory. It forgets the saloon.

COACH OLSON PROVES OF VALUE TO ROBINS

By Garry Schumacher
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, July 9.—It is becoming increasingly apparent that the first step toward the present high estate of the dashing Robins was taken the day Uncle Robbie decided to sign Ivan Olson to a coach's contract.

The canny Olson, versed in all the tricks and subtleties of the game and possessed of a sound knowledge of big league tactics, has been an inestimable worth to the Robins this year.

It hasn't been brought to the attention of Ebets Field fadom as often as it should have been since Ivy must work from a position in the background—but all those close to the club know and appreciate the value of his services.

The coaching job on a major league club isn't merely a matter of standing on third base foul line, waving the base runners home. A thousand and one details are wrapped up in the task.

It's the coach who must take the signs from the manager and relay them to the base runners and batters. It's the coach who must study the play of the opposing team and attempt to detect their signs and ferret out their intended maneuvers.

Occasions without number arise must be made, when time doesn't permit a relay of signals from the bench. It's the coach then who must assume the responsibility.

A thankless task, too. Correct advice is expected. The wrong play is open to criticism of the second guessers on the bench and in the stands.

Olson has attended to all these details in a most competent manner. He's been on the job every day, devoting all his thoughts and attention to the team's problems. He's never shirked responsibility nor has he on the other hand overstepped the bounds of his authority.

Moreover his influence upon the individual players has been of a favorable character. The players like him and respect him. They listen to what he has to tell them and follow his advice.

He still retains the spirit that established his reputation as an aggressive player during the days of his own active service, and he has tried to instill that attitude toward the game into the minds of the players.

Success has favored his efforts too. The Robins are a fighting ball club this year, even if they do lack the color of the Glants and the "hoopla" of the Chicago Bruins. Time and again the Robins have come from behind to win vital games, and during the last home stand when everybody was in a slump they fought their way through on courage alone.

Grant Injunction Against Strikers

intending to enter its employment, whether actual force or violence or not."

The decision was a lengthy one, totalling about 40 typewritten pages, the paragraphs being given in a clear and decisive manner.

The defendants were ordered to pay the costs of the proceedings.

The cause of the difficulty between the plaintiff and defendant is designated both as a lock-out and as a strike.

In his decision Judge Keller stated "We are of the opinion that it partook of the nature of both. The action of the plaintiff in closing his factory on March 28th, 1930, was in effect a lock-out. However, after the first hearing on April 8th, 1930, the defendants were given the opportunity to return to work under the same conditions and terms that existed before March 28th, 1930, as they were needed, depending upon the amount of work on hand, that they either had knowledge or notice of this fact is not open to dispute.

They refused to return unless the plaintiff agreed to submit to their dictation, and division of work. Following their refusal to return to work it was no longer a lock-out but a strike on the part of the defendants."

Rev. Andrews will be formally installed at services to be held at Ridge Valley on July 20. A reception will be held at Ridge Valley early next month.

Number of Old Sturdy Dwellings of Interest Still Remain in Edgely

horses, and stabled many on the grounds of "Shady-side."

born in the place now occupied by the Hawkes family was the late Judge Amos Briggs, of the Philadelphia, court. For some years the deceased Mr. Briggs resided in Tullytown.

Many of the older residents of Edgely will recall the days of the old toll

A widely-known individual who was gate, which was located at the upper end of what is the present Edgely, where those passing up and down Bristol Pike were required to pay tolls. There are many who still remember how vehicle operators would cut over to Haines Road to save toll costs in those days.

The toll gate property is still standing, having been purchased in July, 1902, by Frank H. Hellings, from the Bristol and Frankford Turnpike Company. For seven or eight years previous to the purchase of the property by Mr. Hellings, his father, Edmund K. Hellings, conducted the toll gate business. Prior to the time Mr. Hellings collected tolls a man named Robinson was in charge.

The toll gate building has been moved back a little distance from the main highway since its purchase by the Hellings family, and the slight straightening of the road a few years ago also widened the distance between the house and the thoroughfare. The Pennsylvania railroad passes in the rear of the property. The structure has been greatly renovated since it was used for public purposes. There are also some Edgelyites who remember when a toll gate was operated at the front of the present residence of T. G. Hawkes by the late William Lovett, Sr., operator of the Yellow Tavern.

The Edgely railroad station, once known as "Cold Spring" has not always been located at the present site. About a dozen years ago it was about 1½ blocks below its present site, being located near Edgely avenue. The piece of ground was the gift of Mortimer Brown, who owned a large farm in Edgely.

For the short period of time that the post office was located in the railroad station, Mrs. Lois Williams, wife of John Williams, was in charge. Mrs. Williams was also station agent. She was the only one to conduct the post office at Edgely, the same being discontinued in 1906.

The farm occupied by the late Mortimer Brown, who was responsible for the gift of a parcel of ground for the station property, was situated along the Delaware River, and extended back toward the canal for some distance. Brown a Philadelphia lawyer, occupied the farm in Edgely as a summer home.

Those who recall somewhat what the Brown farm looked like 40 or 50 years ago are hardly able to recognize it today, for the extensive acres are now practically covered with dwelling houses. The place was known years ago as "Riverview Farms," and it is from this that Riverview avenue receives its name. The Brown farm adjoined the Hawkes place on the north. The original farm house is well over 100 years of age. Of recent years it has been made into an apartment house, being owned and operated by Mrs. John Hibbs.

It is interesting to note here and there among the dwelling places on the one-time farm old trees, which long ago lined the driveway which made its way to the Brown home from the pike below Edgely avenue. It has throughout the years proved necessary to remove some of the trees as houses were erected, but some still stand. The driveway mentioned was made of gravel, and even today some of the residents digging fairly deep in order to plant saplings, etc., have struck a vein of gravel, while the soil a few feet away proved to be quite rich.

One of the interesting features of the old Brown homestead was a runway which led from the stables to the river. Down this were the wagons run, in order that they might be washed in the stream.

Well Lighted Rooms in Generous Design

House No. 643

GOOD lighting and ventilation have been kept constantly in mind by the designer of this attractive face brick home so suitable for construction anywhere. The well-placed outside chimney, the sloping roof over the entrance and the long sweep of the roof in the rear all combine to give this home individuality.

Permanence of beauty as well as construction has been given to the house through the use of face brick on the outer walls and flat tile or slate on the roof. This combination results in a home that retains its natural beauty through the years, taking on a mellowness that becomes only more charming as the years pass by.

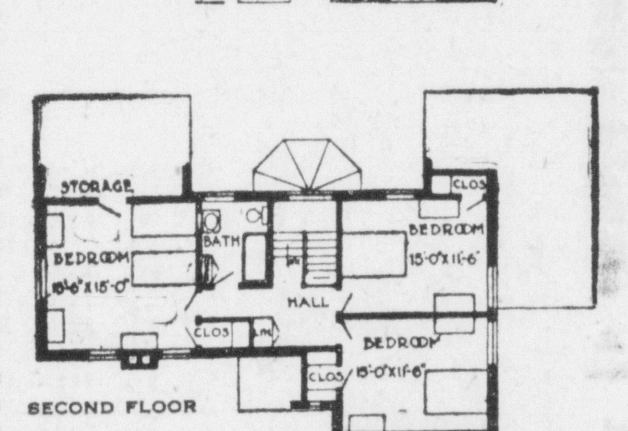

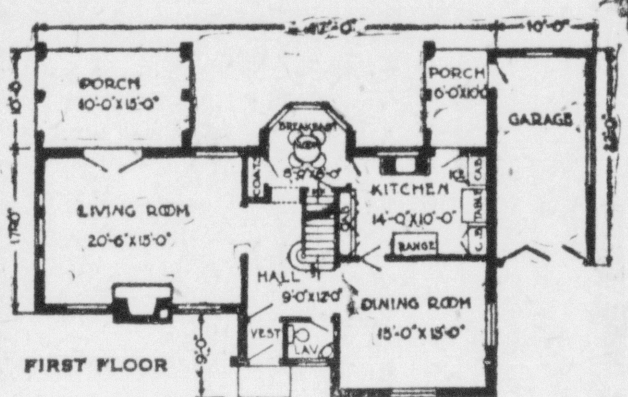

The unique placing of the breakfast room is a feature of the first floor plan. Upon entering the hall a glimpse is obtained, through an arched doorway of this cheerful room, placed in a bay under the stairway. Through the windows in this bay one has a commanding view of the garden and when the sun is in full play the brightness makes this room an ideal one in which to start the day in a pleasant frame of mind.

The large living room, 20 feet 6 inches by 15 feet, is exposed on three sides, two sides having windows and the other having an opening onto a large, arched porch. The rear window permits a view of the garden. The dining room is directly in front of the kitchen and has windows on two sides. The kitchen is unusually large and is fitted with cabinets which displace a pantry. Besides being in close connection with dining and breakfast rooms, the kitchen opens onto a porch which is generous in size and has a direct opening into the attached garage. A lavatory off the hall completes the room arrangement on the first floor.

On the second floor are three spacious corner bedrooms, each with a large closet.

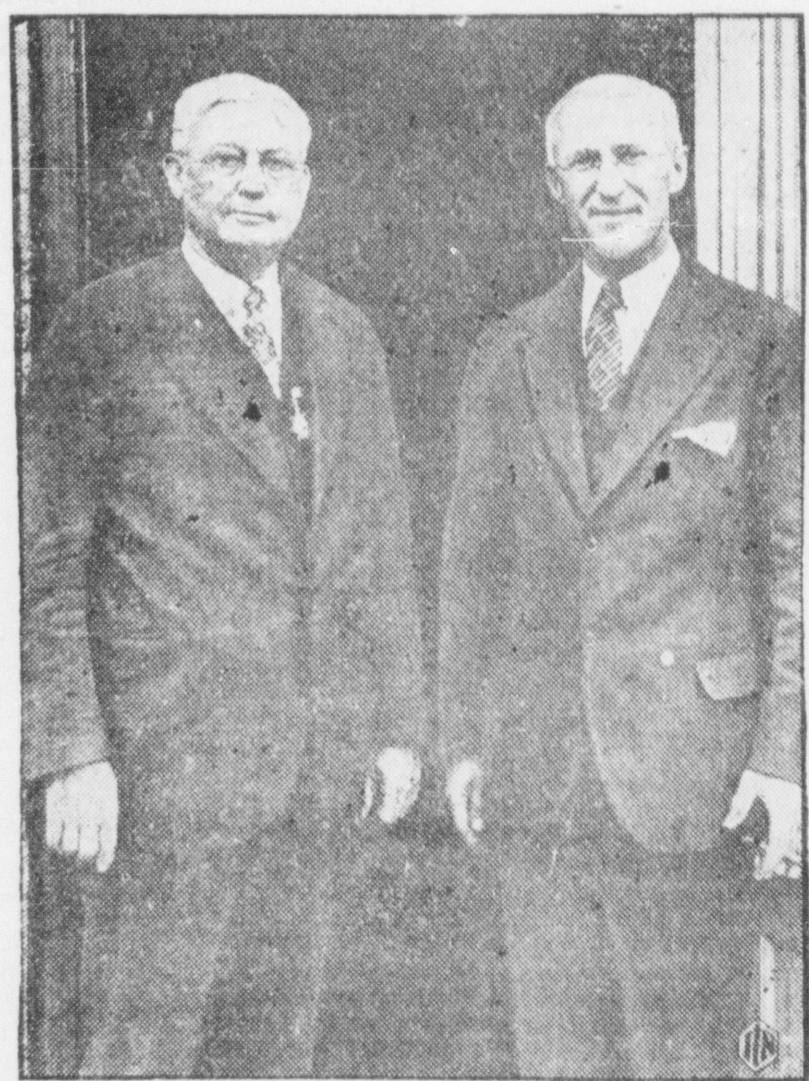

The bath is located at the head of the stairs and of equal distance from each of the rooms. There is a linen closet in the hall and a towel cabinet in the bathroom. Under the sloping roof over the porch is a large storage space, part of which could be added to the bedroom if so desired. A 50-foot lot would accommodate this house if placed endwise to the street; a 75-foot lot would be necessary if placed broadside to the street. The ceiling heights are 8 feet 6 inches and the content is 32,850 cubic feet.

If you are interested in working drawings for House No. 643, the editor of this paper will gladly tell you where they may be obtained.
